Why in Sakaleshpur ?

Sakleshpura or Sakleshapura is a hill station town and headquarters of Sakleshapura Taluk in Hassan district in the Indian state of Karnataka.

The primary mode of employment in the Sakaleshapura region is agriculture. Crops grown include coffee, rice, pepper, cardamom, ginger and tea with coffee being dominant. Sakaleshapura coffee is shade grown on the slopes of the Western Ghats as the elevation is not high enough to enable the intensive cultivation practices followed in the Brazilian and Colombian highlands. But shade cultivation is acclaimed by environmentalists rather than sunlight cultivation followed in Ethiopia and other African Coffee growing nations, as western ghats runs through Sakaleshapura.

Large timber yielding trees such as Rose wood and Jack trees provide shade for these coffee bushes. Coffee growers are typically small farm owners with plantation sizes ranging from 10 acres (40,000 m²) to 10,000 acres (40 km²) as in Kaadumane Estate. Of late, several corporations such as Tata, IBC Group and the TI group have adopted large scale cultivation. The larger plantations process and market the coffee themselves in the domestic and international markets.

Sakaleshapura Taluk accounts for around a third of Indian cardamom production.
